On the Road nearing Roanoke, Va.
January 9, 1918.

Darling Fan:-

So far the trip is very pleasant, but feel kind of lonesome. I slept fairly comfy, but somehow, found it hard to fall asleep, probably because I was worried. The man sleeping above me will mail this at Roanoke, Va, his stop. Found him very pleasant company. He was across & has related all his experiences to me.

The train is kind of crowded. The people that we met at the station are making fools of themselves, but I reckon they mean nothing by it. Talking their heads off with nothing at all.

How are you feeling, Lou? How's mondear. Can't write much as the train is rocking too much.

With love,

Lovingly,

Joe.

Dear Mondear:-

Feel O.K. so far? ~~How~~ How are you feeling. Love.

Joe.
